MISCELLANHOUS READING. THE LITTLE SHOE.

I found it here-a worn-out shoe, All mildewed with time and wet with dew Tis a little thing; ye would pass it by With never a thought, or word, or a sigh; Yet it stirs in my heart a hidden well.

And in eloquence of the past doth tell. It tells of a form that is cold and still-Of a little mound upon vonder hill, That is dearer for to a mother's heart Than the classic statues of Grecian art: Ah! strangers may pass with a careless air, Nor dream of the hopes that lie buried there

Oh, ye who have ne'er o'er a loved one went-Whose brightest hopes have ne'er been swept, Like the pure white cloud from the summer sky-

Like the wreath of mist from the mountain high-Like a rainbow, beaming a moment here,

Then melting away to its native sphere-Like rose leaves, loosed by the zephyr's sigh, 1,000 Like that zephyr wafting its performe by-200 Like the wave that kisses some graceful spot 125 That passes away, yet is ne'er forgot; It like these your life hopes have never fled, Ye cannot know of the tears I shed. Ye cannot know what a little thing From memory's silent Sent can bring The voice and form that were once so dear; Yet there are hearts, were they only here. That could leel with me chen, all wet with dew I tound it this morning his little shoe!

This may be explained in two ways, either by a sympathetic constantaneous action of the nerves of voluntary motion in the finger, and in those of the tongue, which is most probable; or it may be that the movement of the finger distracts the attention of the individual from his speech, and allows a free action of the nerves concerned in articu-
